

T H E WESTERN REBELLION

The following 261 Persons were CONDEMNED by Lord Chief Justice JEFFERIES, in September, 1685, and EXECUTED at the following Places.

At TAUNTON 19 executed Sept. 30th.

R Obert Perratt, a Henry Lifle, Abraham Annesley, b Benjamin Hewling, c Pierce Morren, John Fricker, John Savage,	Abraham Matthews, William Jenkins, d John Dryer, John Hucker, e Jonathan England, John Sharpe, f William Davison,	John Williams, John Patrum, James Whetham, William Satchell, John Trickey.

a This gentleman was the first executed. He was a brewer of the city of London, and had been very zealous for the duke, by whom he was made a major. He made a long speech under the gallows, but was at first seemingly low; yet he afterwards raised his voice, and appeared more like a devout minister in the pulpit, than a prisoner going to be executed. He foresaw the revolution, that followed these cruelties, and spoke particularly of it.

b Mr. Annesley was first made lieutenant, and afterwards a captain of foot. He fought very courageously, and though he was in the hottest part of the battle, he escaped unhurt. He said, that he did not repent of his rebellion (so called;) for if he had a thousand lives, they should be all sacrificed in support of so just a cause. Witness his refusing pardon, on the ignoble terms of impeaching another.

c This young gentleman was but twenty-two years of age, a Londoner, and, as some say, a relation of Cromwell. He landed at Lyme with the duke, by whom he was made captain of a troop of horse; but was not in the battle, having been detached to Minehead for cannon. His sister, Miss Hannah Hewling, was not the lady debauched by General Kirk at the White Hart inn, a story on which Pomfret founded his poem of Cruelty and Lust; but she was the person, who supplicated the judge's mercy in favour of her brother, offering one hundred pounds but for two days respite, and laying hold on one of the wheels of his coach, feemingly to stay it till her request was granted. Jefferies however, regardless of her tears, ordered his coachman to cut her hands with his whip ; and the utmost that she could obtain was to be referred to the pardon-monger of the day, who exacted the enormous sum of one thousand pounds, for permitting her brother's remains to be buried in St. Mary Magdalen's church, in Taunton : And this was owing chiefly to the interest of a great officer in the king's army, who appeared to be truly sensible of his piety ; for he was oftentimes afterwards heard to say, " If you would learn to die, think of Mr. Hewling, and the young men of Taunton, who suffered with him."

d He was a promising young gentleman, about twenty-one years of age, the son of Mr. William Jenkins, of London, a famous dissenting teacher, who died in Newgate a little before. This was his only son, who was so much exasperated at the death of his father, that he gave mourning rings with the following motto ; " William Jenkins, murdered in Newgate : " For which he and several others were taken up on suspicion, and committed to Ivelchester gaol, some time before the duke landed, by whom they were released. He had once an opportunity of escaping in disguise ; which he rejected, saying, that he was neither afraid nor ashamed to die.

e This gentleman was a forge-maker of Taunton, the father of Mr. Robert Hucker, of that town. He was a captain of foot in the duke's service, and was taken prisoner on the day of battle. Yet he is charged by the late Mr. Hollis in his memoirs, and some other writers, with having pleaded at his trial, that he fired a pistol to alarm the king's army, which was the chief cause of the duke's defeat ; and that in consequence thereof he had surrendered himself, claiming the benefit of the proclamation. But the contrary of this is true ; for in a letter, which he wrote to one of his friends a few hours before his death, he cleared himself from this slanderous imputation. Great intercession was however made for his life ; but his having been a principal person in the management of elections of members for the borough was much against him. He was constable of the town in 1672, portreeve the year following, and church-warden in 1674. It appears by the parish books, that he wrote an excellent hand, and was the first person who signed the officers' accounts, &c.

f Mr. Sharpe is supposed to have been the son of the Rev. Emanuel Sharpe, who succeeded to the vicarage of Taunton, St. Mary Magdalen, when the Rev. George Newton was ejected, in 1662. He was the great-grandfather of one Reuben Sharpe, now a sergeant in the Somerset militia.

Note, Besides the above nineteen executed in one day, there were two others, who were executed immediately after they had received sentence, because they had pleaded Not guilty, in disobedience to the judge's directions, viz. Simon Hamlin and William Gatchell. The former was altogether innocent ; and Bernard Smith, the mayor, with all his cruelty, would willingly have saved him, declaring to the judge in court, that he had committed him by mistake. " What is that to me ? " replied Jefferies. " You have brought him on. If he be innocent, his blood be upon you." The latter, Mr. Gatchell, was constable of the hundred, hundred, and had been forced against his inclination, by some of Monmouth's party, to execute what they called the king's warrant. So that the judge ought not have been angry with their pleading Not guilty, as they could not have pleaded otherwise, without a manifest breach of truth. It appears by the parish books, that Mr. Hamlin was overseer of Taunton St. Mary Magdalen in 1677.——Perhaps it will not be improper to observe, that Bernard Smith, son of the mayor above mentioned, hanged himself at one of the windows of Wilton church.

At DORCHESTER 13, Sept. 7th.

Thomas Smith, g	John Game,	Robert Pinney,
Samuel Hilliard,	Joseph Speed, i	John Wills,
Matthew Bragg, h	George Seaward, k	Thomas Welch.
Benjamin Gray,	John Fawne,
Henry Ford,	Philip Levermore,

g He was constable of Chardstock, and having some militia money in his hands, had been compelled to deliver it to a party of the duke's men. Mr. Smith remarked this to the jury, observing at the same time, that little credit ought to be given to the evidence, as they were the same who had before witnessed against his neighbour, Mr. Bragg. The judge upon this put himself in a violent passion, saying, "Thou villain! methinks I see thee already with a halter about thy neck. "Thou impudent rebel! to challenge the king's evidence!" Being found guilty, he was, by particular directions from the judge, the first man executed.

h Mr. Bragg was an attorney at law, of Sadburrow, in the parish of Thorncombe, near Chard; and was uncle to William Bragg, Esq. who married one of the daughters and coheiresses of Edward Paulett, Esq. of Goathurst. As he was returning home from keeping a court, he met a party of Monmouth's men, who obliged him to shew them the house of a Roman-catholic priest just by; for which he was summoned before a neighbouring justice, and admitted to bail. He attended the affizes in the way of his profession, and was particularly noticed by Jeffries; to whom he surrendered himself in discharge of his bail, and thought his case of a trivial nature. But the witnesses against him were the priest, and a female favoured by the judge; who declared aloud, that he should be hanged, for that he had made a promise, that no lawyer or parson should escape him. He was therefore condemned on Saturday the 5th of September, and executed the Monday following.

i Mr. Speed was one of the principal inhabitants of Colyton, in the county of Devon, and a person of unblemished reputation. His dying speech wrought repentance in his enemies.

k This man was one of the same place, a fellow volunteer and fellow sufferer.

At LYME 12, Sept. 12th.

Abraham Holmes, l	Benjamin Temple, p	Samuel Robins, t
Christ. Battiscombe, m	Arthur Matthews, q	Josias Afcue,
William Hewling, n	Joseph Tyler, r	John Madders, u
Sampson Larke, o	William Cox, s	John Kidd, w

l This gentleman was a lieutenant-colonel, an old and gallant officer, who had served under Cromwell with distinguished reputation.

He accompanied the duke to Holland, by whom he was made a major-general. In the action at Philips Norton, one of his arms was shot to pieces, so that it hung only by the flesh; and in consequence of this being soon taken, he was stripped by the soldiers, and carried naked before a justice of the peace, who humanely clothed him. His shattered arm being an incumbrance to him, he laid it on a dresser, and cut it off himself with the cook-maid's knife. He was hanged on the very spot, where he landed with the duke.

m Mr. Battiscombe was a young gentleman, who lived near Lyme. Great interest was made for him, and he was several times at the judge's lodgings, who offered him pardon, if he would impeach others; which he nobly refused. Among the petitioners for his life was a young lady, to whom he was engaged to be married; who making her humble request on her knees to the judge, his insulting cruelty dictated this reply: That he could only spare her part of him; but as he knew what she wanted, it should be that part which she liked best, and he would give orders to the sheriff accordingly.

The following VERSES were composed on this Occasion.

HARDER than thine own native rocks!
 To let the charming Sylvia kneel,
 And not one spark of pity feel!
 Harder than senseless stones and stocks!
 Ye gods! what showers of pearls she gave!
 What precious tears! Enough to save
 A bleeding monarch from the grave.

By every hapless virgin curs'd!
 Winter blasts not more unkind;
 Deaf as the rugged northern wind;
 By some Welch wolf in murders nurs'd!
 Hast thou eyes, or hast thou none?
 Or are they worse than marble grown?
 Since marbles weep at Sylvia's moan.

Rebels stiff, and supple slaves,
 All the frantic world divide;
 One must stoop, and t'other ride;
 Cringing fools, and factious knaves:
 Tho' falling on the loser's part,
 Gentle death arrests my heart,
 And has in honey dipp'd his dart.

Life, farewell! thou gaudy dream,
 Painted o'er with grief and joys,
 Which the next short hour destroys,
 And drowns them all in Lethe's stream!
 What blest mortal would not die,
 Might he with me embalmed lie
 In precious tears from Sylvia's eye?

n He was but twenty years of age, a lieutenant of foot, and brother to Mr. Benjamin Hewling, who suffered at Taunton. The maidens of

of Lyme, partly by the assistance of the populace, and partly through the connivance of the persons in power, buried his remains in Lyme church-yard.

o This gentleman was a learned and pious dissenting teacher of Lyme. As he was about to make a speech to the populace before his execution, he was interrupted by the guard with this laconic observation : That the work of the day was so great, they could not afford him time.

p Dr. Temple was one of Nottingham, who going to Holland for experience in his profession, met with the duke, who engaged him as his physician and surgeon. He knew nothing of the duke's intention of invading England, till they had been some time at sea : Yet notwithstanding this, no interest could save him. He therefore resigned himself to his fate with becoming fortitude.

q This gentleman was a captain of foot. He died very heroically, forgiving the executioner at his earnest request, but advising him to leave off his bloody trade ; who replied, that he was forced to it against his mind.

r Mr. Tyler was a gentleman of Bristol, and had a command in the duke's army. He was very learned, and had some talents for poetry, as may be seen by a hymn, which he wrote a little before his execution.

s This was the first man who enlisted with the duke after his landing. His two sons, John and Philip, were also condemned, but were indulged with the privilege of being transported to America.

t This person was a fisherman of Charmouth, who went on board the duke's ship, to dispose of his fish, and was of course compelled to pilot him into Lyme. He would however have been pardoned, had it not proved in court, that a book, entitled The Solemn League and Covenant, had been found in his house.

u This gentleman was constable of Crewkerne, and was very active in forwarding an express of the duke's landing to the king. He afterwards accepted the command of a company in the duke's service, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Sedgmore. He would probably have been pardoned, but that one of the witnesses in his favour overdid it, by calling him a good protestant. "Oho !" says Jefferies, "he is a presbyterian. I can smell them forty miles. He shall be hanged." He was the last but one executed that day.

w This gentleman was a captain, and the last person that suffered. Though he was a man of great courage, he seemed to shrink, when he beheld the other eleven dead before him, and said it was a dreadful fight ; but after praying very devoutly for some time, he seemed comforted and resigned to his fate.

Note, It is observed by Mr. Pitts, who was a spectator, that these twelve persons were to have been drawn to the place of execution on a fledge ; but no cart-horses, or even coach-horses, could be made to draw it, so that they were obliged to go on foot. This was much remarked at the time, and was considered by many as a kind of miracle.

At SHEPTON MALLET 12.

Joseph Smith,	John Gilham,	Richard Chinn,
Stephen Mallet,	Giles Bramble,	William Crufe,
		Thomas

Thomas Pavier,	Thomas Smith,	John Combe,
John Holdefworth,	John Dorchefter,	John Graves.

Note, John Afhwood was alfo to have fuffered, but was reprieved.

At CHARD 12.

Edward Foote, x	Humphry Hitchcock,	Henry Easterbrook,
John Knight,	William Godfrey,	James Durnett,
William Williams, y	Abraham Pill,	Edward Warren,
John Jervis,	William Davy,	Simon Crofs.

x In another account this perfon is called Edmund Fort, perhaps by a miftake in tranfcribing.

y This perfon was the duke's domeftic fervant, and was taken in the battle of Sedgmore.

At ILMINSTER 12.

Nicholas Collins,	Thomas Barnard,	Robert Fawne,
Stephen Newman,	William Wellen,	Wefton Hillary,
Robert Luckis,	John Parfons,	John Burgen,
William Kitch,	Thomas Trock,	Charles Speke. z

z This gentleman was the fon of George Speke, Efq. of Whitlackington. It is faid, that he did no more than make obeifance to the duke, as he paffed through Ilminfter ; which compliment the duke returned with fhaking him by the hand, and which, at his trial, was conftrued into an approbation of the rebellion. It was alfo proved, that he was a proteftant diffenter, and had lately purchafed a profitable place in the King's Bench. The major of the firft regiment of guards afked Jefferies, whether any favour would be fhewn him ; who replied, " No : His family owes a life. He fhall die for his brother, who is guilty of " being in the action, but has efaped." He was greatly efteemed in his neighbourhood, and feveral of the fpectators, who were affembled in crouds to take their laft farewell of him, offered to die in his ftead. A proclamation was iffued againft George Speke, Efq., his father, and John Speke, Efq. his brother ; the former of whom was obliged to advance ten thoufand pounds to be free from further perfecution, and the latter efaped beyond fea, where he fpent his time in travel till the reftoration. Mr. Speke was a defcendant in the twenty-third degree from Richard Speke, the firft of the name that fettled in Somerfetfhire ; who was defcended from the famous Walter L'Efpec, of Yorkfhire, founder of the three large abbeys of Kirkham, Rievaulx, and Wardon. John Speke, Efq. one of his anceftors, was honoured with a letter from Edward V. dated June 5th, 1483, requiring his attendance at the tower of London, to affist at his coronation, and to receive the order of knight-hood. Another of that name was appointed one of the commiffioners for adminiftering the oaths in 1534. There was alfo a George Speke, Efq. who was high fheriff of the county of Somerfet in 1592 ; and a Sir Hugh Speke, who was created a baronet by Charles II. John Speke, Efq. the brother of the unfortunate gentleman here fpoken of, was elected representative in parliament for the borough of Taunton in 1695.

Hugh Goodenough,	William Somerton,	John Walrond,
Samuel Cox,	John Mafters,	David Langwell,

Ofmond

Ofmond Barrett,	Edward Burford,	John Stephens,
Matthew Crofs,	John Mortimer,	Robert Townfend.

At F R O M E 12.

Francis Smith,	Robert Beaumont,	George Huffey, a
Samuel Vile,	William Clement,	Thomas Paul, a
Thomas Warr,	John Humphreys,	Laurence Lott,
Philip Ufher,	Robert Man,	Thomas Lott.

a These two men were wool-combers, one of whom lived in or near Taunton, and the other in or near Ilminster. They were both advanced in years, Huffey being about seventy, and Paul upwards of sixty. They often declared, that they had not been in the least concerned on either side; but that having been taken up on suspicion, they had imprudently pleaded Guilty, in hopes of being pardoned. It is said of the latter, who was one of the people called Quakers, that just before he was executed, in a kind of prophetic spirit, he foretold the revolution exactly as it happened.

At B R I D G W A T E R 9.

Robert Francis,	John Hurman,	John Trott,
Nicholas Stodgell,	Richard Harris,	Roger Guppy,
William Moggridge,	Richard Ingram,	Isaiah Davis.

Note, There were three others ordered for execution, but reprieved under the gallows, viz. Roger Hoare, Hugh Roper, and Joshua Bellamy. Mr. Hoare was a capital merchant of Bridgwater, by whose management Alexander Popham, Esq. the mayor, assisted by the rest of the corporation, proclaimed the duke of Monmouth king at the High Cross, and voluntarily raised a military chest, for the support of six regiments of foot then encamped in Castle Field, near that town. He lived to represent the borough of Bridgwater in several parliaments, and was the grandfather of the late town-clerk of Taunton. Mr. Roper owned a considerable considerable estate in the parish of Burnham, where he lived thirty years afterwards.

At YE OVIL 8.

Francis Foxwell,	Bernard Thatcher, b	Edmund Gillard,
George Pitcher,	William Johnfon,	Oliver Powell.
Barnaby Devereux,	Thomas Hurford,

b This person was hanged for concealing Colonel Bovet.

At WELLS 8.

At SOMERTON 7.

William Gillet,	Christopher Stephens,	Joseph Kelloway.
Thomas Liffant,	George Condick,
William Pocock,	Robert Allen,

At BATH 6.

Walter Baker,	Gerard Bryant,	Thomas Collins.
Henry Body, c	Thomas Clotworthy,	John Carter.

c He was a mariner of Lyme, and steadfastly denied the doctrine of passive obedience and non-resistance, though much pressed to acknowledge it by the Rev. Mr. Simpson; who tells us, that his wife, failing in her expectations of saving his life, died before him of a broken heart.

At REDCLIFFE HILL 6.

Richard Evans,	Triftram Clarke,	Philip Cambridge,
John Tincknell,	Edward Tippet,	John Glover.

At AXBRIDGE 6.

Jacob Tripp, d	Thomas Hillary,	Thomas Munday,
Thomas Burnell,	John Gill,	John Butcher.

d This person lived at Shipham, and was brother to Mr. John Tripp of that parish, who was the grandfather of the late John Tripp, Esq. of Taunton. He was totally senseless at the time of his execution, and had been so for a week before; having had the gaol distemper, which would have deprived him of life in a few hours more, had he not been executed.

At WINCAUNTON 6.

John Howell,	John Tucker,	Hugh Holland,
Richard Harvey,	William Holland,	Thomas Bowden.

At MINEHEAD 6.

Robert Jones,	Francis Bartlett,	Simon Hawkins,
Hugh Starke,	Peter Warren,	Richard Sweet.

At GLASTONBURY 5.

John Hicks, e	Israel Bryant,	James Pyes.
Richard Pierce,	William Mead,

e This gentleman was a dissenting minister, the same who sheltered himself in the house of Lady Lisle, and for entertaining whom she was beheaded at the age of seventy. He was brother to the famous nonjuror, George Hicks, dean of Worcester, to whom he wrote a little before his execution, desiring him to intercede with the king for his life; which the dean refused to do, declaring, that he would not speak for a fanatic :

Yet

Yet he himself had been chaplain to the duke of Lauderdale, one of the greatest fanatics in the world. Mr. Hicks's dying speech is preserved by Archdeacon Echard, as a fine piece of oratory; in which he vindicates himself from many accusations, that had been brought against him by his enemies, particularly of being concerned with Lord Ruffel, of being with Colonel Blood when he stole the crown, of assisting him in rescuing Colonel Mason, and of killing the barber of York.

Note, John Broome was also to have been executed, but was reprieved.

	At BRUTON 3.
James Field,	Humphry Beadon,	Richard Bole.
	At SOUTH PETHERTON 3.
Cornelius Hurford,	John Parsons,	Thomas Davis.
	At CASTLE CARY 3.
Richard Afh,	Samuel Garnifh,	Robert Hine.

Hugh Afhley,	John Herring.
	At PORLOCK 2.
James Gale,	Henry Edney.
	At COTHELSTONE 2.
Richard Bovet, f	Thomas Blackmore.

f Lord Stawell, though a tory, was so shocked at the cruelty of Jefferies, that he refused to see him; which affront the judge returned, by ordering Colonel Bovet, a gentleman of Taunton, to be executed at Cothelstone, a parish belonging to Lord Stawell, and where he at that time resided. His lordship, it is said, was much hurt on this occasion, though Colonel Bovet was one of the sequestrators, who had deprived the Stawells of their estates during the usurpation.

The following 70 Persons were EXECUTED at different Times and Places, the same Month they were tried.

Gliffon, Samuel	Parsons, William	Wilmot, George
Goffing, John	Potts, Samuel m
Hall, Richard	Puckeridge, George

g This was a very aged man of Lyme, who was supported by the parish ; which circumstance being mentioned to the judge, he replied, that they had no occasion to trouble themselves on that account, for he would ease them of the charge. At the place of execution, his son offered to die in his stead, and was actually going up the ladder for that purpose.

h This gentleman is styled Reverend, and is said to have been a person of eminent piety ; but whether he was minister of a dissenting congregation, or one of the established church, does not appear.

i Mr. Fouracres, from a consciousness of his own innocence, having pleaded Not guilty, the judge, in order to induce the rest to plead Guilty, and save him trouble, as he expressed it, sentenced him to be hanged immediately, without suffering his friends to speak with him.

k This person was one of Lyme, and, at the time of the duke's landing, appeared in arms to oppose him ; but not being properly supported, he joined the duke's party. When the king's proclamation came out, he surrendered himself, in order to procure his pardon ; but being a few hours too late, the judge would not admit his claim, and he was accordingly condemned to be hanged. As he was going to the place of execution, he said to the guard that attended him, " You seem to be brave fellows ; but if I were to have my life for fighting the best five of you, " I should not question it."

l Mr. Lancafter was one of Bridport. It is said, that, just before he was executed, he prayed for the duke of Monmouth, whom he supposed to be at that time living, notwithstanding the general belief of his death.

m This gentleman, who was about twenty years of age, was a surgeon of Honiton. His extraordinary christian courage astonished the spectators.

n Mr. Rose was a gunner, who landed with the duke, a man of great resolution. He was executed at Axminster, but was much hurried during his devotions, because several others were to be hanged at Honiton the same day.

o This gentleman lived at Colyton, in the county of Devon. He was a great favourer of Monmouth, and prevailed on many of his neighbours to engage in the same interest.

Note, Timothy Dunkin was ordered for execution, but was reprieved.

The following Persons were CONDEMNED, and afterwards delivered over to the under-mentioned Gentlemen for TRANSPORTATION, viz.

A Mr. Burd was one of Beckington, and is said to have proclaimed the duke of Monmouth king, at the head of four thousand men. Soon after he was taken into custody, Dr. Mew, bishop of Winchester, procured his discharge; but being apprehended a second time, and committed to prison by the earl of Feversham, he took his trial at Wells, and received sentence of death. He was afterwards turned over to the pardon-monger, and obliged to purchase his life at the price of four hundred pounds.

B Alderman Holliday, the father of this gentleman, appeared in court in behalf of his son claiming the benefit of the proclamation, as he had surrendered within the limited time, and offering to be bound for his future good behaviour. The judge told him, that he knew many aldermen who were villains, and that he hoped to beat some fur out of their gowns, before he had done with them.

C Mr. Lawrence was condemned to be hanged, for suffering the duke of Monmouth's men to carry off two horses from an estate at Lyme, of which he had the management. He however procured his pardon, by paying down two hundred pounds, and giving security for two hundred more.

D This man would have been acquitted, had he not unfortunately served his apprenticeship with a person of bad repute, who occasionally went under the appellations of pettyfogger, money-scrivener, country conveyancer, puritanic teacher, and chimney-corner counsellor. This person had been tried for perjury, and was afterwards obliged to fly his country for other crimes; and it was generally believed, that his late apprentice did his domestic as well as dirty work in his absence.

E This

THIS gentleman lived at Lymington, in Hampshire, and was the author of a paper entitled The Observer, which was written in answer to another called The Trimmer. He had the precaution, when he was taken, to conceal his name; and being indicted by the name of Thomas Pitts, was acquitted. But the judge, discovering afterwards who he really was, ordered him to the bar a second time, and had him indicted for assuming a wrong name; of which being found guilty, he was sentenced to be imprisoned seven years, to be whipped once a year during that time through every town in Dorsetshire, to pay a fine of one hundred marks to the king, and to find security for his good behaviour during life. To evade this severe sentence, he drew up a petition to the king, which was actually presented to him at Winchester, requesting, that he would mercifully be pleased to grant him the favour of being hanged. At last, by the intercession of friends, and the assistance of a considerable sum of money, he obtained his pardon, and lived to visit his unhuman judge, when a prisoner in the tower.

TO the above account of the judicial proceedings against the adherents of the unfortunate James duke of Monmouth, it will not be amiss to subjoin a few particulars respecting the defeat at Sedgmore, and the barbarities that followed immediately upon it.

The approach of the king's forces under the command of the earl of Feversham was first discovered by Mr. William Sparke, a farmer of Chedzoy, who was at that time on the tower and, by the assistance of a glass, saw them coming down Sedgmore. One Richard Godfrey, of the same parish, was immediately dispatched to Weston Zoyland, to take a nearer observation; who, having informed himself of their strength, and the order of their encampment, ran to Bridgwater to apprise the duke. A consultation being held, it was determined to assault the royal camp in the dead of the night. Accordingly on Sunday the 5th of July, a little before midnight, the duke's party marched out of Bridgwater, taking Godfrey with them for a guide; who conducted them through a private lane at Brandney, (known at this day by the name of War-lane,) and passing under Peafy-farm, brought them at length into North-moor, directly in the rear of the king's army. Unluckily for the duke, at this juncture juncture a pistol was fired by some person unknown, which alarming the enemy, they soon put themselves in a posture to receive the attack.

The action began on Monday morning, between one and two of the clock, and continued near an hour and half. Sixteen only of the king's soldiers were killed, (as appears from a memorandum entered at the time in the parish register at Weston ;) five of whom were buried in Weston church, and eleven in the church-yard. Above one hundred were wounded, and among them Louis Chevalier de Mifiere, a French gentleman, who died of his wounds, and lies buried in the church at Middlezoy. On the part of the duke, three hundred were killed in the field of battle, and five hundred taken prisoners, of whom seventy-nine were wounded. They were all confined in Weston church, where five of them died of their wounds. About five hundred more were taken prisoners in the pursuit, and upwards of five hundred were apprehended afterwards by the civil officers and others.

Immediately after the battle, the earl of Feversham ordered twenty-two of the prisoners to be hanged on the spot ; four of whom (to use the words of the register above mentioned) were " hanged in gemmacefs," i. e. in chains. The fate of one man in particular is too extraordinary to be passed over. This person, who was remarkably swift of foot, was prevailed upon, on condition of being pardoned, to entertain the general with an instance of his agility. Accordingly, having stripped himself naked, a halter was put round his neck, and the opposite end of it was fastened to the neck of a horse. They started at a place called Buffex-rhine, and ran from thence to Brintsfield-bridge, a distance somewhat exceeding half a mile ; and though the horse went at full speed, the man kept pace with him the whole way. But notwithstanding this exertion of his ability, and the terms of the agreement, the inhuman general ordered him to be hanged with the rest.

The barbarity of the soldiers, who were employed in burying the slain, was yet greater. Several unfortunate men of the duke's party, who lay wounded on the field, were thrown into the earth with the dead ; and some of them endeavouring, with the little strength they had left, to crawl out of their graves, were prevented by the unfeeling soldiers, who dispatched them with their spades.

The next day a new scene of slaughter was opened at Taunton, where nineteen prisoners were hanged and quartered on the Cornhill, by order of General Kirk, who caused their bowels to be burnt, and their mangled limbs to be boiled in pitch, and set up in the streets and highways. This execution was followed by several others of the like kind.

The whole of those that died on this occasion, either in battle, in prison, or by the hands of the executioner, and those that otherwise suffered in their persons or fortunes, amounts to more than two thousand.

It is observable, that a person, who had assisted at the executions at Taunton, and on that account had acquired the name of Tom Boil-man, being at plough in a field near North Petherton, a violent thunder-storm obliged him to seek for shelter ; when retiring under an oak, and leaving a boy in the mean time to look after the plough, he had not been there but a few minutes, before he was struck dead with lightning.
